General anaesthesia or general anesthesia (see spelling differences) is a medically induced coma with loss of protective reflexes, resulting from the administration of one or more general anaesthetic agents. It is carried out to allow medical procedures that would otherwise be intolerably painful for the patient; or where the nature of the procedure itself precludes the patient being awake.

The word stochastic is an adjective in English that describes something that was randomly determined. The word first appeared in English to describe a mathematical object called a stochastic process, but now in mathematics the terms stochastic process and random process are considered interchangeable. The word, with its current definition meaning random, came from German, but it originally ...

Calcium (Ca 2+) as an important second messenger regulates a variety of cellular functions, including contraction, secretion, metabolism, gene expression, cell survival and cell death. Calcium ions enter the cell mostly through transmembrane proteins, called calcium channels. Calcium flow through the calcium channels (either voltage-dependent, or receptor-operated) does not require energy, in ...
